OUTLOOK

U.S. President Donald Trump came to power promising to deliver steep tax cuts and a massive economic stimulus program. Since then not much has happened on that front, but equity markets seem to be embracing Trump and consumer confidence has been improving – at least in the U.S.

In Canada, the federal government is still rolling out its economic stimulus program. However, economic growth continues to surprise to the upside. But there is some uncertainty over whether OPEC and some non-OPEC countries will be able to follow through on their agreement to reduce oil production. As a result, oil prices have been volatile.

Another issue adding to economic uncertainty in Canada is the potential re-negotiation of NAFTA. We believe these negotiations will happen, but we don't anticipate that the outcome will impact growth in 2017.

Despite the political upheaval in Europe economic growth has been decent, jobs have been created and consumer confidence has been growing. But with two elections coming up, we think the next quarter will be very important in determining the future health of the EU, and whether it's time to look for opportunities to invest or to be bearish.

Overall we are slightly bullish on equity markets. But much of this depends on whether Trump can deliver on his promise to stimulate the U.S. economy.

PORTFOLIO REVIEW

Sun Life Granite Enhanced Income Portfolio rose 2.7% in Q1.

The portfolio benefitted in Q1 from the continuing strength in equity markets that spilled over from 2016. This included U.S. equities which rose in part on strong economic forecasts and the possible adoption of a broad economic stimulus program in the U.S.

Gains in the portfolio were further enhanced by maintaining an underweight to bonds, as well as through the use of bullish option strategies and increasing the weighting in equities globally.

To mitigate some of the volatility that may occur if U.S. fiscal stimulus is not implemented this year, protective near-term option strategies involving global equities and U.S. bonds were employed near the end of the quarter.

CONTRIBUTORS

- Underweight bonds, overweight equities and bullish option strategies
- Overweight Canadian and global equities
- Underweight global REITs

DETRACTORS

- Significantly underweight infrastructure equities
- Overweighting Canadian bonds versus U.S. bonds

KEY TACTICAL CHANGES

- Overweight U.S. financials and Canadian energy primarily through bullish option strategies
- Options strategies used to reduce potential volatility in global equities and benefit from short-term strength in U.S. Treasuries

Markets rallied when U.S. President Donald Trump came to power promising to deliver a large economic stimulus program and that momentum carried over into the first quarter of 2017. We had moved to a slight overweight position in U.S. equities ahead of Trump's election.

But we adopted protective option strategies near the end of the quarter to mitigate potential volatility in global equities as valuations briefly got ahead of themselves. We are also concerned that Trump's economic stimulus program may not be implemented until next year.

While moderately bullish on global equities, we are also being cautious given developments involving Brexit and the uncertain political environment with elections coming up in France and Germany. We are not concerned about an anti-EU party rising in Germany, but in France polls show Marine Le Pen's anti-EU platform gaining support. We don't expect Le Pen to win, but if she does European markets may be hurt. We will be looking for opportunities to capitalize on potential volatility associated with the French elections, including through option strategies.

We are generally neutral on the Canadian economy but continue to be overweight financials as well as the energy sector. We believe these sectors should benefit from a steepening yield curve and higher oil prices by the end of the year.

After a surge in late 2016, Canadian bond yields fell in Q1 with the yield on Canadian 10-year government bond starting the quarter at 1.87% and ending at 1.63%. Similarly, yields on U.S. 10-year Treasuries moved lower from 2.63% to 2.39%. Lower yields were tied to weakness in economic data and the increased likelihood that Trump's economic stimulus program won't be implemented as quickly as many market participants had thought. But we still expect both Canadian and U.S. yields to move higher by the end of year, possibly significantly depending on global developments.

Sun Life Granite Managed Income Portfolios invest in mutual funds and/or exchange traded funds (ETFs). Commissions, trailing commissions, management fees and expenses all may be associated with mutual fund investments. Investors should read the prospectus before investing. The indicated rates of return is are the historical annual compounded total returns including changes in security value and reinvestment of all distributions and do not take into account sales, redemption, distribution or other optional charges or income taxes payable by any securityholder that would have reduced returns. Mutual funds are not guaranteed, their values change frequently and past performance may not be repeated.

The funds intend to make monthly distributions at a fixed rate. An investor’s actual annual distribution rate is dependent on the net asset value of the units at the time they are acquired, and on the rate of distribution at such time. Distributions should not be confused with “yield” or “income”, and are not intended to reflect a fund’s investment performance or rate of return. Distributions may be comprised of income, capital gains or return of capital. The distribution rate on units held by an investor may be greater than the return on the fund’s investments. If the cash distributions paid to an investor are greater than the net increase in the value of the investment, the distribution will erode the value of the original investment. Distributions are automatically reinvested in additional units of the applicable fund unless the investor instructs us to distribute cash. If necessary, a fund will make an additional distribution of income and capital gains in December of each year. The funds may make additional distributions of income, capital gains or return of capital at any other time as we consider appropriate. A distribution of capital is not immediately taxable to an investor but will reduce the adjusted cost basis of the investor’s units. There can be no assurance that a fund will make any distributions in any particular month, and we reserve the right to adjust the amount of monthly distribution if we consider it appropriate, without notice.
